Redeeming Railroad Tickets.

To make it as convenient as possible for passengers to redeem unused railroad tickets, the Pennsylvania Railroad has established a rule which provides that the return portion of an excursion ticket may be redeemed at the ticket office at which it was bought, if presented by the original purchaser.

Until recently, if one wished to redeem any Pennsylvania Railroad ticket, it was necessary to forward it to the General Passenger Agent at Philadelphia, with attendant delay. On August 7th, the company announced that, to make it more convenient for passengers to redeem railroad tickets, it had established a rule that wholly unused tickets might be redeemed by the original purchaser at the office at which it was bought. Now this privilege will be extended to passengers holding unused return portions of excursion tickets.

REVIEW OF EVENTS AT COUNTY SEAT

Interesting Correspondence from Our Doylestown Representative.

Doylestown, November 26.

Most everybody out of jail, and some that are in there, who are fortunate enough to live at the county seat, will give thanks this year and the reasons for giving thanks are as varied as the people themselves. Some county officials are thankful that this is not their last year in office and nearly all the employes feel sure of another term; merchants are thankful that Teddy is in South America and his socialistic utterances, in their opinion, are not doing much harm to their business. Doctors are thankful because collections are easy, and the working man is thankful because work is plenty and wages good and so on down the list of people who sometimes think they have nothing to be thankful for and, like all towns of this size and kind, we have our full share of pessimists.

All of the churches, except the Episcopal and Roman Catholic, will combine and hold a union service in the Beckman Memorial Methodist church, at which service Rev. Haines, of the First Baptist church, will preach the sermon, the other clergyman assisting at the service. Turkey will be the standard dish, that is if the price falls as predicted to about that of chicken or duck, and there will be a universal holiday here.

Our Board of County Commissioners with their solicitor, John L. Du Bois, Esq., and clerk, Washington Cadwallader, spent a couple of days in Norristown this week on the Hilltown Turnpike damage case. A jury was called and a verdict taken although the case was actually settled out of court. The jury appointed by the court to assess the damage gave the turnpike company only $5,325 which, upon investigation, the county commissioners found was entirely too low a price and as the turnpike company had appealed the case they at once started out to get expert opinions on its value from engineers well qualified to fix the value of the road bed and the bridges. They found that if they tried the case that double the award of the damage jury would fall below the value placed on the pike by their own witnesses but the commissioners always alert to save the county money made an offer of $10,000, which was scornfully refused by the turnpike company, who, judging from past verdicts of Montgomery county juries in similar cases, had reason to believe that they would get $25,000 or near that sum if they tried the case, but when they actually got into court the commissioners had them scared and a compromise was made for $11,500, a probable saving of from six to eight thousand dollars for the county of Bucks, provided that the county has it to pay, for there seems to be a prevalent opinion that as it is one of the State roads that eventually the State will have to foot the bill, but that does not in anyway detract from the good work done by the county commissioners in effecting such a favorable settlement and the effort they made to save all they possibly could for the taxpayers. It only proves the good common sense of putting business men into offices of trust and responsibility and getting the benefit of their ability. By the terms of the settlement the commissioners get the toll houses and land they occupy which will reduce the amount to be paid to a little over nine thousand dollars and it may make a still larger reduction if they have good luck in selling them.

Washington Camp, No. 631, of Doylestown, P. O. S. of A., were turned down good and hard by the borough school board, when they offered to present the board with a flag for their new school building or one to fly from a pole in the grounds. The camp took their medicine with rather a wry face but determined that if they could not put "Old Glory," in the town they would do the next best thing and put it all around the town and with that end in view they will raise a flag at Edison, just south of Doylestown, on the day after Thanksgiving and soon after that one at the new schools at Wycombe and they then expect to put a couple in Buckingham, two or three more in Doylestown township, so that they will eventually surround the town.

Deputy Sheriff Nelson K. Leatherman is some detective as well as some sheriff. A few days ago he received word that Clarence W. Groff, formerly a resident of Sellersville and a member of the United States Coast Artillery, stationed at Boston, Mass., had forgotten his duty to his country and had deserted on the thirty-first of last October. Sheriff Leatherman at once proceeded to look him up and finally decided that he might be heard of at the home of his sister in Philadelphia, so he proceeded to interview the sister and selected a time, as it happened, when Groff undertook to pay his sister a visit. Groff was promptly put under arrest and of course denied that he was the man wanted but the sheriff would take no denial and when Groff found that he was in custody for keeps he at once owned up and begged the sheriff not to take him back to Boston and as both our sheriffs are very sympathetic and always feel badly when they have to enforce any legal process, Sheriff Leatherman took the man to Fort Dupont, along the Delaware, and came on home with the feeling that he had done his work well and Uncle Sam evidently was of the same opinion for closely following the arrest came a check for fifty dollars as a reward to Sheriff Leatherman for his good work.

Once again the county seat missed having a serious fire because the fire laddies stopped it before it had a good start although for a few moments it looked as though it would take all the strength of the fire company to handle it. The alarm was sounded on Sunday afternoon at about half past four, a time at which there was fortunately a number of firemen at the fire house and as the location was on Shewell avenue, next door to the armory, and but a short distance from the fire house, the boys with the chemical apparatus were soon on hand and there was no necessity to attach the hose to the plugs. The house belongs to Robert Riale but is occupied by Aaron Landis. A little girl was up in the second story back room and other amusement failing she began playing with matches which resulted in her setting fire to the bed and when the firemen arrived upon the scene the mattress and bed clothing were burning fiercely, sending out great quantities of smoke which made access to the room difficult. With the aid of the chemicals they soon extinguished the flames and threw the mattress and bed clothing out of the window leaving only the matting and rugs to be disposed of which was quickly done. The fire company, by its promptness and success in handling fires, has so lowered the rates of insurance that they are now as low as any in the State, but for all that property owners do not seem to appreciate their services for there is still a debt on the building which should be paid, and the company is in sore need of a chemical apparatus that will have a much greater capacity than the one they now have.

A Liberal Education.

Thomas Henry Huxley.

That man, I think, has had a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will, and does with ease and pleasure all the work that as a mechanism it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold, logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength, and in smooth working order; ready, like a steam engine, to be turned to any kind of work, and spin the gossamers as well as forge the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the great and fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations, one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all vileness, and to respect others as himself.

Such a man and no other, I conceive, has had a liberal education.

Woman's Influence.

Disraeli.

It is at the foot of woman we lay the laurels that without her smile would never have been gained. It is her image that strings the lyre of the poet, that animates the voice in the blaze of eloquent faction and guides the brain in the august toils of stately counsel. Whatever may be the lot of man, however unfortunate, however oppressed, if he only love and be loved, he must strike a balance in favor of existence, for love can illumine the dark roof of poverty and lighten the fetters of the slave.

NEW MONEY ORDER PLAN.

Postoffice Department Would Cash Checks at Any Station.

Washington.—Officials of the postoffice department have determined to urge congress at the regular session to amend the postal laws so that money orders may be paid at any postoffice in the country, although drawn on a given office. A committee appointed by Alexander M. Dockery, third assistant postmaster general, has worked out details of the plan.

Information has reached the department that the express companies already are opposing the plan because it would mean a sharp curtailment of the money order business handled by them. The expectation is that banking interests also will oppose the plan, as it would be likely to cut into the bank draft business.

Under such a system a money order would be treated identically as a draft or express money order. The party to whom such an order was made out would indorse it just the same as a draft or check, making it payable to the bank or individual whom he desired to cash it if he did not take it to the postoffice.

Postmaster General Burleson will include the proposed change in the money order system in his annual report. Officials of the department are confident that congress will act favorably upon it.

MILK CURE FOR BABIES.

London Physician Discovers Cause of Infants' Illness.

Baltimore.—Dr. Ralph Vincent, director of the research laboratory of the Infants' hospital, London, announced here that he had discovered the bacillus that causes stomach trouble among infants. He read a paper before the local Academy of Medicine and told of some recent discoveries that he believes will be of great value in combating infantile diseases.

The principal topic was milk. "That is the whole story of disease among infants," said Dr. Vincent. "Get pure milk and keep it pure and there will be practically no disease among the babies. Milk should be given infants just as it comes from the cow, without boiling or any other preparation."

BONDS OF RECLUSE FOUND.

Are Contained in Small Safe in the Rear of Pawnshop.

Fort Scott, Kan.—More than $60,000 in government bonds and other securities was found in the small room of a pawnshop in the negro district of this city, where Thomas Lahey, a recluse, lived many years. Lahey dropped dead the other day.

He was known to own thirty-three cheap dwellings and had no patience with the talk of the high cost of living, boasting that he was living on $1.50 a week.

His brother, John Lahey of Arma, Kan., retained a lawyer and together they broke into the safe. Another brother of Lahey lives somewhere in California, and three sisters, whose addresses are unknown, lived in Pennsylvania when last heard from. Search is now being made for a large amount of gold Lahey is supposed to have hoarded.

LOST HORSE TURNS WILD.

Animal Astray in the Woods For Months Shy as a Deer.

Ishpeming, Mich.—Clarence Dawson and Bert Walker, Ishpeming men, have recovered a horse that had broken away from them in the wilderness twenty miles from the city early last spring, when they were on a fishing trip.

A homesteader saw the horse a few days ago and notified the owners. The horse was as wild as a deer and was corraled with difficulty.

The men had never expected to see the animal again. They believed it had been devoured by wolves or had strayed many miles from the district.

BRIDE'S WEIGHT IS 560.

While Bridegroom Only Tips the Scales at 133 Pounds.

Davenport, Ia.—Hundreds attended the marriage of A. L. Woollett, weight 133 pounds, of Ornsby, Wis., and Miss Ama Gene Bare, weight 560 pounds, of Olympia, Wash., the bride being the heaviest woman in the west. Miss Bergina Delboyo was bridesmaid, while acting as best man was James Boyd.

Both contracting parties are with a carnival company, but have been acquainted for sixteen years. They attended school together.

The ceremony was performed by Deputy Treasurer C. C. Gibson, formerly a minister of the Church of Christ. A handsome silver service was given to the bride by members of the carnival company following the marriage.

CHATTANOOGA NOW NEARER THE ORIENT

Tennessee River Made Navigable the Year Round.

Chattanooga.—Completion of the lock and dam at Hale's bar, near this city, marks one important step by the government in its plan of making the Tennessee river navigable all the year. It presages the time when there will be an uninterrupted navigation between all points on the Tennessee, Mississippi and Ohio rivers, and also between this section and the orient via the Panama canal.

The great project at Hale's bar, thirty miles below Chattanooga, includes a lock built by the government and a dam and powerhouse erected by the Chattanooga and Tennessee River Power company. Many serious obstacles to navigation have been forever obliterated by increase in depth of water for many miles above the dam.

The project is peculiar in that it is the first instance where a private company was permitted to construct a dam across a navigable river, where river improvement and power development have been combined. The work has been done under supervision of the secretary of war.

The lock at the opposite end of the dam from the powerhouse is built against a rock bluff and has a clear width of sixty feet. It is about 300 feet long inside the gates. The lower gates are fifty-nine feet high. Each gate weighs 129 tons. The dam is 1,200 feet long; average height, fifty-two feet, eleven feet four inches wide at the top and from fifty-seven to sixty-four feet wide at the bottom, according to depth of foundation. The power house is sixty six feet wide and 353 feet long. It contains fourteen turbine units, each capable of delivering 5,250 horsepower or a total of 73,500.

The power from this station will be carried to Chattanooga at 40,000 volts over 175 steel transmission towers, the line crossing the winding Tennessee river twice in order to maintain a straight course. A substation in the city not far from the river bank, has equipment to step down the current for the various uses to which it will be put.

HOLDS COURT BY PHONE.

With Receiver at Ear Judge Asks Questions and Gives Order.

Denver.—A rap of the bailiff's gavel, followed by a loud "Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye!" brought a number of spectators to a halt in the first division of the district court. Court attaches assumed their accustomed places, and the first judgeless court ever held in Denver was in session.

Judge J. E. Little, eighty miles away, was presiding. He was giving orders to the division clerk, Lynton Hubbard, over the long distance telephone from Colorado Springs.

"Hello?" greeted his honor. "Is the court in session?"

"The court is in session, your honor," replied Clerk Hubbard.

"Take this message and enter it on the docket," said Judge Little.

"The judgment in the case of Charles Miercourt against Charles and Blanche M. Snyder is set aside. The finding of the court is that the judgment was not regularly obtained. You may adjourn now."

The judgment against the Snyders, amounting to $1,730, was awarded by a jury over which Judge Little presided last May. The judgment was set aside on the showing made by Snyder that he had not been officially notified concerning the date of the trial and the case was allowed to go by default.

NAME WOMEN IMMORTALS.

Five Illustrious Females on List Prepared by Professor Matthews.

Chicago.—Professor Brander Matthews at the American Academy of Arts and Letters named five Americans who, he says, are eligible as "immortals." They are Ida M. Tarbell, research; Mary Wilkins Freeman, fiction; Edith Wharton, fiction; Mary Cassatt, painting, and Margaret Deland, fiction.

"There are other women who might obviously be eligible," added Mr. Matthews, "but these five came first to my mind.

"I want to put you right on the question of the admission of women to the 'immortals.' It has not been discussed at this session of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, because no woman has been proposed for membership. The subject has not come up officially for ten years, since the admission of Julia Ward Howe.

"The five come to mind as women about whom there could be no question of worthiness, but I believe it would be advisable for them to start an 'immortals' of their own."

Rat Short Circuits Current.

Argos, Ind.—The charred body of a rat explained the reason for the sudden going out of electric lights here. Argos gets its current from Rochester, south, in Fulton county, and lights there were affected. The rat's body formed a short circuit that played havoc with the lighting system.

FROM MISSOURI.

Out in Missouri they have been building roads in a most unprecedented and highly indefensible manner The governor called for volunteers of whom 250,000 responded with the result that 400 miles of roads were built in two days at an estimated saving to the State of $1,500,000

Missouri is certainly trying to show us but if we're wise we'll take no notice of it whatsoever That's no way to build roads The way to build roads is to begin with a long and heated campaign by well trained oratorical candidates expatiating patriotically upon every possible con and pro Following this should be bond issues advertising for bids, letting contracts levying taxes, assessing taxes gathering taxes, paying out taxes, resting sinking funds and perhaps rebuilding the roads before the original bonds are paid off In addition to a modicum of graft at every step of the way, there must be legitimate profits all along the line to financiers, furnishers of raw material lawyers, contractors political bosses ward heelers, etcetera The whole nicely trimmed with a plentitude of palaver parley platitude, and prattle of patriotic purpose

Missouri's method is altogether too primitive and uncivilized It would be positively fatal to do things in such a simple and direct way Evolution would be running on four flat tires in no time —E O J in Life

Much has been said of late about the popularity of the "Back to the farm" movement on account of modern methods of soil tillage, up-to-date machinery and a better knowledge of farm management, says an exchange, but practically nothing has been said in regard to power for household use, best methods of securing a plentiful water supply for the house, the most sanitary methods of disposing of sewerage, and up-to-date methods of furnishing light and heat or the farm home These household problems must be solved before the "Back to the Farm" movement will ever be popular Women are not going back to the farm to milk cows and make butter without the help of a cream separator and other modern conveniences with power to run them Never again will she be willing to carry water for household use when modern inventions are cheaper than human strength, never again will she be content to spin and knit and weave like her grandmother did, or be a slave to the broom and dust cloth when a vacuum cleaner saves its price in doctor's bills every year of its installment

It is apparently a foregone conclusion that there will be no fusion campaign against the Republican party in Pennsylvania next year It is the sentiment of the Washington party leaders as far as determined to put a straight Washington ticket in the field for Governor, Lieutenant Governor United States Senator and other offices. Fusion will probably be effected in certain Congressional districts.

The citizens of Waunakee, Wis, are certainly showing themselves to be public spirited men Realizing the value of a local newspaper in every community, they have incurred the expense of sending the local newspaper into every home not already receiving it within a radius of ten miles of Waunakee They are not only doing this for the mutual benefit of the newspaper and its readers, but also to boost trade in Waunakee through the medium of the advertising columns If all communities would follow their example the country newspaper business would enjoy a great boom and the business would enjoy a great boom and the business and prosperity of the small town would be increased proportionately

It is told of a famous English statesman that he spent an evening playing billiards at his club His opponent, an elderly man of sportive aspect, won steadily The statesman, an unusually good player himself, closed the contest, by putting away his cue and remarking A fair degree of proficiency at billiards is a gentlemanly accomplishment, sir, but such diabolical skill as you show indicates a misspent life "

Is the pure food and drugs act to be so extended that it will pertain also in the case of general merchandise? Advices from Washington have it that President Wilson has let it be known that he is heartily in favor of extending the pure food and drugs act to include general merchandise, especially clothing so that it will be unlawful to transmit in interstate commerce any article that is not correctly labeled as to quality, weight and measure. Representative Barkley, as chairman of a subcommittee of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, is preparing a bill for this purpose Public hearings will be granted on the measure and it will be ready for the House early in the regular session

Labor organizations and leaders are coming out for woman suffrage all along the line. John Mitchell speaking in Butte, Montana, said, recently, "Women should have the right to use the ballot for their own protection They say that the place of women is in the home I grant it. But we face the fact that in this country there are 5,000,000 women compelled to earn their own living These women should have the right to use the ballot in their own protection On all the great moral questions that affect the home, the great mass of women will vote right They will make mistakes The men have made mistakes but we can't lose anything by letting the women have a chance "

The Symbolic Key.

Art, music and poetry have in all ages been considered the polite arts, but what is art without the proper portrayal of the dress of the age that it seeks to represent What is music that does not bring inspiration from the masters of the past who were clothed in the power to give us glimpses of men and ideals of whom the only lasting impression can be gained by the form our imaginations give to them? And our imaginations clothe them in robes in which their creators sent them out on their errands, of giving the world higher ideals Then what is poetry but thought clothed in words? No matter from what side viewed, the figure of speech of clothing is the symbolic key that gives entrance to these higher realms and therefore why should not clothes themselves touch the hem of the garments of the arts, with which they are so closely in touch?—American Tailor and Cutter.

Resolutions of Respect

The following resolutions of respect in memory of our late brother John Sheehey, were read and approved at a meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians on November 26th

Whereas, Since our last meeting it has pleased God, the Great Counselor of the universe, to send into our midst the dark Angel of Death that he might perform the function of his office upon our esteemed brother John Sheehey, that by the release of the imprisoned spirit it might fly up on the wings of love up to its Heavenly home, where glad shouts of ransomed hosts welcome it to its eternal rest, and,

Whereas, The circumstances surrounding his death are of such a sorrowful character, leaving as he did, a brother and sister and numerous relatives and friends to mourn his loss, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow our heads in humble submission to the inscrutable decree of our Almighty God, at the same time we cannot restrain the expression of our deep sorrow at the death of our late fellow member, who had endeared himself to us by a congenial disposition the warmth of his courage and the honesty and integrity of his convictions

Resolved, That in the death of Brother John Sheehey we are reminded very forcibly of the uncertainty of life, and, taking his demise as an example, we urge upon our members the necessity of keeping their souls continually prepared for the eternal judgment, for we know not the day or the hour when death shall come, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Brother John Sheehey, we lose not only a worthy and beloved brother, but our community an honorable and upright citizen, and our nation a true and loyal subject,

Resolved, That as a token of respect the charter be draped in mourning for thirty days and a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes and be published in the Bucks County Gazette and Daily Courier

TRICKY ANIMALS.

Some Are Simply Fakers While Others Are Real Criminals

There are crooks among animals just as among men' said a nature student Take for example the horse A horse looks very noble very honest eh? Yet time and again a horse will feign lameness in one leg or the other because he knows that when he's lame his boss will let him loaf

"One responsible writer tells about a chimpanzee that they once fed on cake and wine when he had a cold The rascal fakes up a bad cough in the hope of getting more wine and cake

"Many birds are tricky and some are notorious thieves, particularly the raven and the crow But the cuckoo is the worst. The cuckoo is too flighty a lady to be willing to sit in a nest and hatch out eggs so she lays in the nests of other birds, one here and one there, and, by Jove to complete the deception she abstracts an egg from the nest she lays in so that the addition of her own egg won t be noticed

'A criminal—not a common crook—is the Australian parrot. Once a vegetarian this foul bird now lights on a sheep's back and standing where the sheep cannot reach him he hacks his way down to the liver, which he eats Sheep murdered by parrots for their liver constitute one of the grave losses of Australian farming" — New York Tribune.

FOREIGN BORN WOMEN.

How They May Become Naturalized, Married or Single

A foreign born unmarried woman may become a citizen by being naturalized To do this she must be twenty one years of age and have lived five years in this country, one full year of which has been lived in the state in which she makes her application Or she can marry a man who is a citizen, for the wife's citizenship follows the husband and she continues to retain her citizenship if she continues to reside in the United States, unless she renounces the sovereignty of the United States.

A foreign born woman living in the United States whose husband is a foreigner, who refuses to become naturalized, cannot become a citizen unless separated from him by divorce or death.

A native born woman who marries a foreigner loses her citizenship during the time of the married relation, but upon the death of her husband or divorce from him she may resume her citizenship by registering, within one year with the American consul in the country of her residence a declaration that she desires to do so, or she may resume it by returning to the United States to reside.—New York Post.

A War Trick of the Great Hannibal.

When Hannibal, the great Carthaginian, was fighting Eumenes of Pergamos with a fleet of very inferior strength he hit upon an artifice which would scarcely be sanctioned by the laws of what we are pleased to call civilized warfare. He discovered by means of a bogus message under a flag of truce on which ship the king was He then caused poisonous snakes to be inclosed in earthen jars. These he distributed among several ships and ordered them to close up on the king's galley In the melee that followed the jars were flung unto the deck. The curious bombs were greeted at first with ridicule, which soon changed to panic when the nature of their contents made itself manifest. The galley was extricated from the fight as soon as possible, and the captains of the others believing that the king had taken flight followed suit, with the result that Hannibal gained a complete victory.

RAILROADS IN GERMANY.

Fine Discipline Because Employees Are All Ex Army Men

It is well known that practically all of the railway employees of Prussia have served in the army When they enter the railway ranks from the army their credits are allowed for their military service and certain positions are reserved for army men This military experience shows its influence on their department and discipline in railway service There is a noticeable orderliness and precision about everything connected with German railways In respect for authority and strict observance of the rules the German railway employee has no superior

The traveler will not fail to notice the red capped station master standing at attention on the station platform as the train passes through each station He will also find the senior signalmen gatemen and other employees connected with the train service always in evidence standing like sentries as the train passes The operating official while riding over the line can thus take a census of all employees in positions of responsibility When he alights at a station his rank is at once recognized The station master immediately salutes and gives a verbal report of the situation at his station If the official goes into a signal tower the signalman in charge salutes and reports If he goes into an engine house the foreman salutes and gives a brief report of the work in progress —Railway Age Gazette

FORKS OF TREES.

They Stay Where They Develop and Never Grow Any Higher

Some people through careless observation believe that the fork of a forest tree will gradually grow higher from the ground If they would investigate it would be found that the forks and heads of fruit trees are at exactly the same point where they were when first noted

The state forester in inspecting locust and catalpa groves throughout the state has found owners who have not removed one part of the fork of those trees that have formed forks below the fencepost length believing that in years the fork would grow up and a fencepost could be cut below the fork This erroneous belief is the cause of so much of the delay and neglect of pruning in early life of street and roadside trees

It should be remembered that the base of a fork or a branch of a tree will always remain at the same distance above the ground The side branches of some trees such as the elm usually continue to grow upward, while those of other trees such as the maples incline upward when young and as the tree grows older the weight of the branches gradually brings it to the horizontal The latter often makes the removal of large branches necessary which not only spoils the symmetry of the tree but usually starts decay which soon kills the tree —Indiana Farmer

TRAVEL AS AN EDUCATION.

It Depends Not Only on What You See, but How You See It

Travel is an education but there may be need of compulsion to make it take A man who spent much time in a foreign country says that he has learned more about it by reading than he ever did by seeing In many instances the sole gain of the traveler is recreation Nothing is carried away but surface impressions The often noticed contest among tourists over the fundamental questions Did you go here?" or Did you go there?" hints at the sum total of knowledge that was gained An intelligent reader would pass a better examination even on the superficial aspects of foreign lands than many of the great family of trotters

This is not to say that the traveler must go about with a mind so serious as to be oppressive, but if he is to benefit much by his journeyings he must be alert and inquisitive and give his memory some exercise. He must have purpose enough to try to add to his stock of valuable knowledge and he must be able to understand the significance of things and to make intelligent comparisons Otherwise it makes little difference whether he travels all over Europe or walks around the block where he lives Mere moving about never educated any one. On the other hand, it is possible to get a very large fund both of pleasure and profit out of good books concerning strange places —Chicago Record Herald.

A LITERARY ROMANCE.

Pathetic Ending of the Love Story of the Poet Laforgue

In George Moore's Impressions and Opinions is told the touching love story of the poet Laforgue who was reader to the empress of Germany

One winter day in Berlin Jules saw a girl skating as none ever skated before. The grace of the waist, the flowing hair and the feet lifted beneath the dark skirt filled him with happiness The beautiful skater was an English girl

He resigned his place as reader to the empress and married, and he and the beautiful English girl came to Paris in the hope that literature would yield them a living But Laforgue's genius was of the kind that wins the sympathy of the elect and instead of making his living with his pen Jules grew more and more consumptive.

I have heard that the young people lived in a poor apartment two or three rooms—and that the beautiful English girl now stricken with the dreadful malady passed between the rooms with tisanes Friends climbed the high stairs to see them on Thursday evenings a few admirers attended Jules funeral and published the volume he left in his desk Les Moralites Legendaires the girl died soon after—two or three months

How did she live during the brief interval? Where is she buried? No body knows Yet I have a separate and complete sensation of these two little lives

Thieves and Their Feet.

A city missionary whose work brings him in contact with thieves was interested in their frequent mention of a certain chiropodist whom they had patronized

"I shouldn't think said the missionary that men of your calling would have either the time or the money to fool away on chiropodists "

'We're just the kind that need to fool away time and money on them one ex burglar explained Of all persons on earth men in our line can least afford to be made nervous by bad feet. Creeping around in a strange place in the dark is ticklish business at the best. It requires above all things sound feet and comfortable shoes To kick a corn or bunion against a rocking chair or the corner of a bureau might knock the most profitable job of the season into a cocked hat."—New York Times

It Was His.

A small boy was telling his mother of a mishap which had occurred to a playmate of his The youngster it appeared had been regaling himself with one of those large, marblelike candies which are a particular delight of childhood and in a moment of excitement it slipped down and stuck in his throat. But said the narrator they succeeded in relieving him

"Oh,' said his mother, 'you got it out did you?

There are Two Kinds of "Purity"—

Any baker can say, "My goods are pure, according to law," and still use benzoate of soda, alum, artificial coloring, desiccated eggs and other inferior ingredients. But—

Ivinsponge

The Popular Family Cake

Is Sold to You Under the Following Specific Guarantee of Purity

"While State and National Pure Food Laws permit under certain conditions, the use of lard compound, cotton seed oil, adulterated chocolate, imitation honey and other cheap substitutes, yet 'Ivins Pure Food Laws prohibit them entirely

"Ivins goods are shortened entirely with Pure Sweet Country Butter and Pure Kettle Rendered Lard

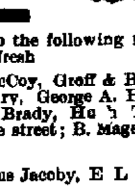

"Ivins use selected candled eggs only

'Ivins do not use preservatives, benzoate of soda, alum or artificial colors "

Now do you see the difference?

Any First-Class Grocer

To Our Patrons

Believing that it would be of interest to you to know about the work that we are doing on our line and why some of the things are being done, we have decided to take this means of letting you know about it In doing this we wish to frankly ask for your goodwill and your help We feel that every employee is doing his level best to give you good trolley service, and if at times we make mistakes, it is not a mistake in our intentions and we beg of you to overlook it and even take the trouble to show us the error

Among other work we have recently accomplished we wish to mention the removal of grass and weeds from along our tracks. This, we hope, will facilitate the operation of our cars during the time that snow is on the ground, as there will be less chance of it accumulating between the rails. It is our desire to be able to keep our cars close to the schedule, even during the bad storms we are likely to have this winter Let us have your good will.

THAT LITTLE HAPPY THOUGHT.

A HELPFUL little happy thought went hastening on its way
All in the early morning of a long
"I've neither hands nor feet nor tongue," it mused, "but I'll not sorrow.
"I've neither hands nor feet nor tongue,"
it mused, "but I'll not sorrow,
For boys and girls are plentiful, and so

Now, little Nell was skipping by to visit little Jane
Presto, the little happy thought was beam-
ing in her brain,
And so she turned and hurried back and stayed at home instead,
Reading with merry, tripping tongue to poor blind Cousin Ned.

Off went the little happy thought and saw some idle feet
Drumming their heels against the steps
upon a quiet street,
And soon those feet were carrying upon an errand hot
Their smiling owner, who had whined and said he'd "rather not."

If "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do,"
Why, then, a little happy thought can set them working too.
And, judging from a-many things I notice
every day,
That helpful little happy thought is still

COMMITTEE PLANS ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Transportation Committee of Chamber of Commerce Working for Numerous Improvements.

The Transportation committee of the Bristol Chamber of Commerce met on Tuesday evening and re-organized by electing S. T. Whittaker, chairman, and James H. Brooks, secretary.

A programme of importance to the welfare of the borough was mapped out. An appeal will be made to the Reading Railroad Company, to extend the free literage charges to the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware river to the extent it does on the New Jersey side. On the Jersey side the company's free literage extends to the Florence, N. J., pipe foundry while on the Pennsylvania side it is only extended as far as the Pennypack creek, Holmesburg. The committee will ask that the service be extended to Tullytown, opposite Florence, so as to include the big pipe works in Bristol, which now does not enjoy the same privileges of its competitors on Burlington and Florence.

The Transportation committee will also tabulate all freight schedules and will endeavor to get another line of river freight boats to stop at Bristol. The matter of a tunnel under the railroad embankment at the Bristol passenger station will be taken up with the officers of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and the company will also be asked to have a New York express train that goes through here to Philadelphia at 9.05 a. m., and to stop here, as the 9.14 a. m. Belvidere train is very unsatisfactory owing to its so frequently being late on account of having to wait for connections at Manunka Chunk.

AUTO SPEEDER HIT MAN AND RAN AWAY

On Sunday evening the first joyride accident in this section occurred in front of the Edgely greenhouses, when Andrew Grandfield, aged forty-one, of Holyoke, Mass., was struck by an automobile. He with a companion was walking to Bristol, and in the glare of the headlight of an approaching trolley car did not notice the swiftly moving auto. His right leg and three ribs were broken and his face was lacerated. The occupants of the auto quickly turned around and sped toward Tullytown, thence by the back road to Morrisville and Trenton. The injured man was placed on the trolley car and brought to the Bristol police station, where his injuries were temporarily dressed by Dr. Fox, after which he was removed to St. Francis hospital, Trenton. The local police force are on the track of the driver of the machine which struck the man.

Jr. O. U. A. M. at Church.

The members of Fidelity Council No. 21, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Bristol, accompanied by their guards, attended divine services on Sunday evening at the Methodist church, when Rev. George M. Brodhead preached a special sermon on the "Principals of the order as applied to daily life." Patriotic hymns were sung and a most impressive scene was witnessed during the singing of the national anthem, "America," when the pastor took a flag and waved it above the altar, then holding it aloft as he pronounced the benediction.

Physicians Entertained at Dinner.

Dr. and Mrs. William C. LeCompte entertained a few up-county medical friends at dinner at their home on Radcliffe street on last Friday. Heritage, Langhorne; R. H Osborne, Morrisville; Horace Fleckenstein, Newportville; George M. Grim, Ottsville; Walter H. Brown, Richlandtown, and Alfred E. Fretz, Sellersville.

Thanksgiving Exercises in High School.

Thanksgiving exercises were held in the Bristol high school assembly room on Wednesday morning, Miss Bartine, presiding. The several numbers on the programme were well rendered and heartily applauded. CONSTABLE MUTH VICTIM OF ASSAULT

Fred Raymond was given a hearing before 'Squire F. I. Kraft, Thursday afternoon of last week, charged with assault and battery upon Constable J. G. Muth, of Bristol township.

It appears that Raymond, who was employed as a driver of a team belonging to Henry Baker, supervisor of Bristol township, was engaged in working with a gang of workmen who are repairing Green Lane.

Baker seeing that Raymond was under the influence of liquor and that he was driving the team near the tracks for the Pennsylvania Railroad, sent Muth who was also working with the gang, to get the team. Baker was afraid that Raymond would drive on the railroad tracks and get the horses struck with the cars.

Muth went to Raymond and demanded the team which resulted in a fight. Raymond struck Muth several times with his whip and also threw him down in the roadway, and had it not been for the timely arrival of Baker himself, Muth would probably have been severely assaulted.

Muth, who is a constable of Bristol township, had a warrant sworn out for the arrest of Raymond and he was lodged in the Bristol station house and was given a hearing Thursday afternoon and was held for his appearance at court.

PREPARING FOR CHRISTMAS RUSH

Bristol Postoffice Seeks Co-operation of Public to Avoid Congestion in Parcels Post Department.

The local postmaster in co-operation with the Postoffice Department at Washington, D. C., is desirous of affording the patrons of the office every facility for the proper and most expeditious delivery and despatch of all matter that reaches this office for delivery, and that which is mailed for outside points.

In order to attain the desired conditions the people of Bristol are earnestly requested to co-operate with the local force and the Postmaster General in the early selection of gifts for despatch through the mails, that the congestion may be avoided. This will alleviate the many disappointments to the sender and the recipient. The public has seemingly formed the habit of mailing parcels containing gifts at the last possible moment in order that same may reach their friends on Christmas. This is unnecessary as the department permits the sender to place on the package in his or her own handwriting, "Not to be opened until Christmas," or words to that effect.

This is the first Christmas for the public to have the advantage of parcel post service. The popularity of this branch of the service, as evidenced by the daily increasing number of parcels received and dispatched, indicates that the Christmas mails will exceed former years.

The local office has posted placards for the information of the public, which read "Christmas parcels should be mailed early, wrapped securely, and addressed plainly." The first admonition is to avoid the congestion, delay and disappointment. The second, because the Division of Dead Letters is constantly in receipt of valuable articles found loose in the mails because of careless wrapping. The third, because poorly addressed articles are sent to the Dead Letter office, the clerks and carriers being unable to decipher the addresses. Parcels may be marked "Not to be opened until Christmas, or a similar direction."

The City and Country-bred Boy.

Quakertown Free Press.

When it comes to giving a good, all-around, verbal beating to an offender of good taste, a self-appointed social regulator and a high opinioned rooster, such as many a city chap has allowed himself to become, the following from the columns of that wide-awake Progressive (spelled also with a small "p") newspaper, the Bristol Gazette, is there "with the goods."

Read it—it's worth while:

"The country 'hayseed' is a favorite joke for the city papers and the impecunious space writers of the dailies love to portray the tiller of the soil as a man who never saw much and knows less. Were it not for the farmers, the receipts of the fair would be mighty slim and he does not make a holy show of himself, either, as the writers try to make out. The pale cadavers who write harmless, soulless lies such as the above to please simple folks like themselves could not get a living on a quarter section of the best land in the country if it were donated to them with improvements, stock and tools. So limited is their reading and their powers of observation that they have not learned that the American farm produces the best all around man in the world."

It's all here, and it's all true, as a notable metropolitan journal tells its readers daily, and what is more, the guilty parties must admit its truth. There's no getting away from it. If, as we have been taught to believe, turn about is fair play, then the rural resident surely has the advantage, for when these cityfied chaps come into the country they display their ignorance of country ethics so palpably that could they see themselves as others see them, they would drop to the level of real human beings, haul down their high-and-mighty demeanor and keep their thoughts to themselves. When it comes down to real facts the countrybred boy can help himself better in the city than can the urban product in the country. This statement comes not alone from observation, but out of actual experience.

And the boy with his trousers upturned;
And the man with the hat made of plush I assert,
I can stand, though the fad I have spurned.
I can stand for the guy with the white in his vest,
And not even grin when he passes,
But I snicker and smile, when I gaze on, the while,
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.
I don't mind the man with the rakish green hat
With the bow in the back, nor the fellow
Who trims off each shoe with an up-to-date spat,
Nor the brother whose gloves are bright yellow.
But I'm ready to flee, when that dandy I see,
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.
I can put up with him who must trim off each sleeve
With a row of pearl buttons, and note
In silence the man (though I secretly grieve)
With the braid on the edge of his coat.
The man with the handkerchief worn to be seen

The Stolen Portemonnaie

She Forgave the Thief Twice

By LILLIAN SHARPE

A young lady sat in a waiting room at a railway station watching the clock as its hands moved slowly toward the time of departure of her train. Presently she turned to a satchel on the seat beside her, placed it on her lap, opened it and took out her portemonnaie, which she laid in the place where her satchel had been.

A young man with curly auburn hair and brown eyes was sitting at the other end of the seat and observed that the girl had forgotten to put her portemonnaie back into the satchel. He kept his eyes on her and it until suddenly a railroad official called:

"Train for Hampton!"

The young lady started, glanced at the clock, saw that the hands stood at fifteen minutes before her train time, remembered that trains are opened to travelers some time before they leave and, grasping her satchel, hurried away. Seeing the words "Ticket Office" over a window, she remembered that she had forgotten to provide herself with a ticket and, turning aside, took position at the end of a line of several persons.

"If that isn't just like a woman!" said the young man with auburn hair to himself and, reaching for the portemonnaie, he put it in his pocket and followed her, taking position next to her in the line. When it came her turn to purchase a ticket she asked for one to Hampton, at the same time opening her satchel. First there was a quick movement of the top articles, then a plunge of the hand down into the bag, after this a convulsive stirring up of everything.

"Oh, heavens, I've been robbed!"

"Permit me to pay your fare," said the young man behind her and, taking out his wallet, he bought a ticket for her and one for himself. Then they both made room for those behind them.

"What shall I do?" wailed the girl.

"You had better get aboard the train. You haven't time to investigate the loss of your portemonnaie, and it would probably avail nothing if you had. Was there much in it?"

"Only $7.3 four postage stamps and some samples."

"What exactness! I wish I could remember things like that. Never mind. I have advanced the amount for your ticket. You haven't lost very much. Good morning." And he lifted his hat deferentially.

Now, the young man knew very well the girl would not let him go without asking his address that she might return his loan. She asked him for it, and he said that it would be more convenient for him to give it to her in the train, so the two went on. He handed her on to the car, took a seat beside her and, producing a card bearing his name, Nathaniel Meriweather, wrote his address on it and handed it to her.

"Why, you live in Hampton!" she exclaimed.

"I don't live there, but I am going there."

That he was going there was perfectly true, but when he had entered the station he had just left he had no such intention. He was going to his home fifty miles beyond.

"But you have given your street and number there."

"That's the address of a friend."

The girl put the card in her satchel, and Mr Meriweather took up the matter of the lost portemonnaie.

"Was any one," he asked, "near you while you were in the station?"

"No one near enough to get possession of anything that belonged to me. Now, I think of it, some one was sitting on the other end of the bench while I was waiting for the train."

"Man or woman?"

"I think it was a man."

"Did you take out your portemonnaie while he was there?"

"Yes, I did. I tired of waiting and took out this magazine." She still held it in her hand. "To do so I was obliged to remove the portemonnaie and some other things which I laid beside me. After getting out the magazine I put them all back again into the bag."

"Are you sure you put them all back?"

"Perfectly."

"Then there can be no doubt about the matter. The man who sat beside you must have been an expert at sleight of hand and contrived to get your pocketbook away from you. I was in the station and saw a man sitting beside you."

"How careless of me! Could you identify the man?"

"I think I could."

"What was he like?"

"Well, he was not a very attractive looking person, but I wouldn't have taken him for a thief."

"Did you notice his features?"

"I noticed one feature. He was a red headed chap."

The young lady cast a side glance at her companion's hair.

"Anything else?" she asked.

"Nothing especial. He was looking at you admiringly. I wonder that he stole from you."

A girl can't help being pleased at admiration even from a thief. The young lady instinctively put her hand to her back hair.

Not long after this, when the train was nearing Hampton, Mr Meriweather thought it better that he should have the young lady's address. He might meet the man who he declared had stolen her pocketbook, and if he did it would be essential that he communicate with her. She gave him her name, Alice Deane, and her address. When Hampton was reached Mr Meriweather handed Miss Deane off the train, and they parted. The next day the former received from the latter the amount he had expended for her ticket.

Within a week Mr Meriweather wrote Miss Deane that he had seen the man who sat beside her in the station, had shadowed him and learned where he lived. Should he have the fellow arrested? Miss Deane replied that if Mr Meriweather could induce the thief to return a sample of ribbon there was in the pocketbook he was welcome to the rest of the contents. The next day Mr Meriweather rang the doorbell of Miss Deane's home and sent up his card. She came down to receive him becomingly dressed, and as she entered the room he held out the missing sample. She received it with some surprise.

"So the man who stole my portemonnaie," she said, "was he who sat beside me in the station?"

"He was."

"And he was quite willing, I suppose, to give up the sample on condition that he might keep the other things."

"Yes."

"That was very nice of him."

"Was there anything else in the portemonnaie that you especially desire?"

"No, there were only the money, a few addresses and the samples. The addresses I know, and the other samples I don't care for."

"The fellow seems quite willing to return everything except the money. He seems to have admired you."

"And yet he stole my portemonnaie!"

"You are wrong in permitting him to go free, you are encouraging vice."

"Do you really think so?"

"I do, indeed. I consider it my duty, being cognizant of his criminal act, to inform the police of it."

And would he have to go to jail?

She raised her eyes to Meriweather's pityingly. He would have liked to take her in his arms and confess that he was chaffing her, but that time had not yet come.

"Yes, he would have to go to jail, and that would surely make a criminal of him for life."

"Don't do it."

"How would it do for him to come to you, confess his crime, restore the other articles and throw himself on your mercy? You could tell him how wicked he had been and picture to him his end if he continued in crime. Then you could forgive him, and he might hereafter live a blameless life."

"I think that would do very nicely. It would be infinitely preferable to sending him to jail."

Mr Meriweather left after a two hours' visit, promising to propose the plan he had suggested to the thief and ask if he would consent to make restitution and ask forgiveness. Miss Deane would be advised of the result.

A few days later Mr Meriweather called and handed Miss Deane the money that had been lost with her portemonnaie, saying that the heart of the thief was slowly softening and he thought that if he could be taken under her influence he might yet make a man of himself. There was another two hours' chat, after which Mr Meriweather departed, intimating that he expected the next time he came to bring the penitent with him.

Nevertheless it required several more calls, each lasting from two to three hours, before the gentleman assured the lady that the criminal was ready to confess his fault and ask forgiveness.

Meanwhile, as may be supposed, other matters than this proposed reformation engaged Mr Meriweather and Miss Deane. In fact, one evening after a visit that was prolonged till midnight Miss Deane consented that Mr Meriweather should go to her father to ask for her hand. The suitor being an estimable gentleman and a good catch received the required consent, and the couple became duly engaged.

A short time after the betrothal Mr Meriweather announced to his fiancee that the next evening the penitent thief would call upon her to restore the remainder of the stolen property, listen to a lecture on his dishonesty and receive her forgiveness. When the appointed time came round there was a ring at the doorbell and a man in an ulster, wearing a heavy beard and glasses, was admitted to the Deane residence. Miss Deane came down, and the stranger in a broken voice said:

"Pardon me for a miserable sinner."

He bowed his head and waited.

"I have been told that this is your first criminal act," said the girl, "and I sincerely hope that it will prove your last. You may have a sweetheart, and think how glad you will make her by your reformation. You are forgiven."

The man threw off his ulster, tore away his beard and his glasses, and her lover stood before her.

"The confession," he said, "comes after your forgiveness. You left your portemonnaie on the seat in the station, and I picked it up. I did so for an excuse to make your acquaintance and prolonged the deception to win you."

Miss Deane stood thunderstruck for a few moments, then turned and was striding indignantly out of the room when the penitent caught her around the waist and held her despite her struggles to be free till she recovered something of her calmness.

"You have forgiven me!" cried her lover. "You can't go back on it."

But she did go back on it, and it was two long days before she repeated the forgiveness spoken to the supposed thief. She does not even now, ten years after the episode, refer to it pleasantly.

Our Limitations

There are noises louder than thunder which we cannot hear, the roar that lies on the other side of silence, writes Frank Harris in "Unpathed Waters." We men are poor, restless prisoners hemmed in by our senses as by the walls of a cell, hearing only a part of nature's orchestra and that part imperfectly, seeing only a thousandth part of the color marvels about us and seeing that infinitesimal part incorrectly and partially.

A DOG IN A GALE.

Able to Keep His Feet Where a Man Would Be Blown Away.

A gale that blows a man off his feet does not bother a dog at all. He will run about unconcernedly while his master walks with the greatest difficulty. This is for the same reason that a high building is more affected than a low one by a gale. It is also because the dog has four legs to support his body, while a man has only two.

With topsails set a yacht would capsize in a gale which it would ride out with safety if only its lower sails were set, for the leverage exerted by the wind increases in proportion to the height at which the sails are set. A man by reason of his height receives far more force from the wind than does a dog.

Then, again, a dog's center of gravity is much lower in proportion to his height than is a man's, consequently he is not nearly so tippy. And it is obvious that any object supported on four legs is more stable than if supported on two.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Light of the Fireflies.

It has been proved by experiments conducted by M. Ives, a chemist, that the light emitted by fireflies, glowworms and other insects is purely chemical and not in any way biological. M. Ives finds that this light is not extinguished by death. Of course after death some stimulus is necessary to excite it, but it can be produced in their tissues two years after death, which makes certain that it is chemical in origin.—New York World.

FOR DELICATE CHILDREN

A Mother's Letter to Mothers.

Mrs. E. W. Cooper of Bloomfield, N. J., says: "My child, seven years old, had a bad cold and was weak and quite run down in health. She had been in this condition for about six weeks when I began giving her Vinol. It was a wonderful help to the child, breaking up her cold quickly and building up her strength beside. I have also found Vinol a most excellent tonic for keeping up the children's strength during a siege of whooping-cough."

Vinol is a wonderful combination of two world-famed tonics—the medicinal body building elements of cod liver oil and iron for the blood, therefore it is a perfectly safe medicine for children, because it is not a patent medicine, everything in it is printed on every package, so mothers may know what they are giving their little ones.

Therefore we ask every mother of a weak, sickly or ailing child in this vicinity to try Vinol on our guarantee.

P. S. Our Saxo Salve is truly wonderful for Eczema. We guarantee it.

MEXICAN WOMEN SHARE HORRORS

Wives and Daughters Heroines In the Long War.

PROVIDE FOOD FOR TROOPS

Their Patience and Endurance Win High Praise—Take Lives In Their Hands as Spies—Seldom Has World Seen Such an Example of Love and Devotion as They Display.

Eagle Pass, Tex.—The horrors of the civil strife in Mexico are shared heroically by the women—the wives and daughters of the poor, ragged soldiers of both forces. Their untried part in the warfare has been going on for the last three years. They are the foragers and in that capacity in the advance guard of the army and do all the menial work in campaigning. While they seldom take part in the actual fighting their hardships are far greater than those of the men. The patience and devotion of the women of the poorer class of the Mexicans are astonishing.

Even the provisional government of Mexico gave semiofficial recognition to women and children as being important adjuncts of the regular fighting forces.

The first definite knowledge that the noncombatants in Piedras Negras situated just across the Rio Grande had that the federals were about to take possession of the town recently was when a train arrived from the south pulling several freight cars filled with women and children. They had been sent on ahead to procure food and have dinner ready for the hungry horde of soldiers who only an hour or two later.

The women dumped their bundles of dirty clothing, cooking utensils and other portable property from the cars, and in a few minutes an open space near the railroad had been prepared for a camp site for the soldiers. Ragged, half clad children, boys and girls ranging in age from 1 to twelve years, rustled around and in a short time they had the campfires going.

In the meantime the women were foraging through the town for food. Here and there a stray pig would be found wandering along the street. The women would give chase, and his fate would soon be settled. If a cow fell into their hands, so much the better.

Each woman works for her own particular mess. If it may so be called. It usually consists of her husband and perhaps another relative or two. There is much rivalry between the women in preparing meals for their respective patrons.

When the repast was over the men and the children lay flat upon the ground and enjoyed a delightful siesta, while the women busied themselves with other duties.

The uncomplaining women are often forced to perform services of the most dangerous and painful character. They have marched hundreds of miles through the cactus covered desert carrying their smaller children and pots and pans upon their backs, while their older offspring trotted by their sides. When the son of one of these women reaches the age of twelve he is given a gun and becomes a soldier.

Seldom has the world seen such an example of devotion to men as is shown by these women. To be sure these poor creatures are densely ignorant and have little knowledge of even the ordinary comforts of life, but their hearts are filled with deep love for the nomadic home and fireside despite its humble surroundings.

In the freight cars that are used to transport the federal as well as the Constitutionalist troops from place to place over the country the women and children are crowded together like so many sheep and cattle. Often they are made to ride in flat cars which are uncovered. In these unsheltered cars the rain pours down upon them.

The women frequently are sent out on scout duty and to discover the plans of the enemy. Only occasionally does a performance of this kind come to public notice. A notable instance occurred just before the recent fall of Torreon. General Trucy Aubert of the federals was anxious to learn the strength of the Constitutionalists. He needed all of his own officers and personal staff and he did not care to intrust the important mission of learning the actual strength of the Constitutionalists to any man in the ranks of his troops.

He mentioned his need to Senorita Lomesa Bordaz, an ardent supporter of the government cause and daughter of a former banker of Torreon. She volunteered to make a trip through the Constitutionalist lines and visit their different camps. Disguised as an old woman of the peon class Miss Bordaz set out on the back of a burro and for ten days traveled from place to place in the valley visiting many rebel camps. At night she slept upon the ground.

Upon her return to Torreon she made a complete report to General Aubert which showed that more than 6,000 Constitutionalists were within striking distance of the town. For the small force of federals to have remained in Torreon would have meant their utter destruction. The town was therefore evacuated by them.

Heredity.

"Higgins is a self made man, is he not?"

"He claims to be, but I do not believe those bad manners of his could ever have been acquired. He must have been born so."—Woman's Home Companion.

THE MAN IN THE ORIENT.

He Walks Ahead of His Wife to Guard Her From Danger.

When husband and wife go traveling together in the orient the man walks in front, careless and free, and the woman walks behind, carrying the bundle. Therefore you say, "The oriental cares not for his women. He despises his wife and uses her as a beast of burden." Most occidentals never get further than that. But if you are observant you go out in the jungle yourself, and you discover things. When you walk abroad there are difficulties and dangers. The paths are overgrown and thorny, creepers must be driven off, and buffaloes are ugly creatures.

In the villages are village dogs which snarl and snap. You are a man, yet you will be glad of some one to go in front of you with a hatchet to clear your way. No woman would walk in front, and the man must be free. Now you see the reason why the man walks in front. If you want to confirm it you inquire and find that this is true. Thus the Japanese, the Burman goes in front of his wife for the same reason that the occidental goes behind—from courtesy. If he continues to do so when it is unnecessary, as in towns where there are roads, it is because a convention once formed is hard to break, east or west.—H. Fielding-Hall in Atlantic Monthly.

PLANS FEDERAL UNIVERSITY.

Dr James to Ask Congress For an Appropriation of $500,000.

Urbana, Ill.—The establishment of one great institution of learning for students from all sections of the United States on the order of the universities of Berlin and Paris is the plan of Dr Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois.

Dr James is now at work on a bill which will be introduced at the next session of congress providing for such a school. It would be located in Washington and rates of tuition would be arranged so that it would be a great democratic school, where the son of the poor man would have equal rights with the wealthy.

It is proposed in the bill, now being framed, that the college should be governed by a board of trustees selected by the president of the United States, and it would be under the control of congress to a greater or less extent. An advisory board consisting of one delegate from each state in the Union would meet and form a definite policy for the institution.

An appropriation of $500,000 to cover the cost of preliminary arrangements and other details will be embodied in the bill which Dr James is now preparing.

Such an idea as this has never been attempted in this country, although abroad the large universities which get their students from all over the countries have proved most successful. The progress of the bill in congress and the efforts of the Illinois teacher will be watched with marked interest in all sections of the United States.

FOR YEARS THOUGHT HIMSELF AN ORPHAN

Recently Found Mother Living and Reunion Followed.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A meeting of a mother and son who had thought each other dead for nineteen years took place when Charles Hatch, twenty-three years old, stepped off a train at Bemidji, Minn., into the arms of his mother.

For nineteen years the Hatch boy has wandered around in state institutions in Minnesota and Illinois with no knowledge of his parentage. Placed in the state home in Owatonna, Minn., when he was four years old, after he had seemingly been left an orphan in Minneapolis, Hatch grew up in the belief that his parents were dead.

When he was fourteen years old he left the home and worked for various farmers in southern Minnesota and later wandered to Illinois. Some weeks ago he was taken sick with typhoid fever and placed in a county hospital at Edwardsville, Ill. Here the officials started to search for the young man's relatives. They learned he had a brother at the school for the feeble minded at Faribault, Minn.

A letter from that institution stated that the mother had died. It was suggested that the Minneapolis Associated Charities might know the mother.

Hatch was brought to Minneapolis, and for the last four weeks the Associated Charities has made a search for his mother. J. J. O'Connor, secretary of the organization, learned his mother had remarried and was living on a farm near Bemidji. A telegram was sent her, and she at once forwarded money and a railroad ticket for her son.

SPOONERS' SEAT WALKED.

The "Overturned Boat" Was a Six Hundred Pound Sleeping Turtle.

Charleston, S. C.—A young couple strolling on Sullivan's island became fatigued.

"Why not sit on that overturned boat over there?"

They did.

But the "boat" moved.

She shrieked and the "boat" moved faster.

It was a 600 pound turtle asleep on the beach.

The turtle carried six men to the water.

In its nest were found 200 eggs.

Spooning couples on Sullivan's island now sit on the ground.

Sheraton's Influence.

Thomas Sheraton, although a cabinetmaker by trade, it is quite probable during his life in London did not actually produce any furniture, as his time was too much taken up by his occupation as Baptist preacher, tractarian, drawing master, designer and publisher to bestow any attention on the manufacture or superintendence of cabinet work. His "Cabinetmaker and Upholsterer's Drawing Book" was published first in 1791 and again in 1793 and 1802. He was possessed of keen critical insight in matters pertaining to high class cabinetmaking, combined with an excellent sense of proportion, sound judgment and purity of taste, and his influence on the style of furniture in the latter part of the eighteenth century was exercised through his designs and criticisms, which had no little weight with the cabinetmakers of his day.—Suburban Life Magazine.

Exercise and Health.

There was a bank clerk who saw the men of his own age losing health year by year through overwork, indoor sedentary life and lack of daily exercise. He saw them growing yellow and flabby and unfit, and the spectacle didn't attract him. He decided that success had better come late or even not at all rather than at the price of a ruined body. Health became to him the choicest of the mercies, the best of life's comrades. Up and away the person in health can dash—to another job, to another clime, master of his fate. Ill health is a chain that ties to the dreariness of what is nearest at hand. After a youth of weakness and fatigue the man was happy in finding that an hour of exercise a day changed the aspect of the outer world and removed him for all time from the ranks of the unfit.—Colliers.

Honored by Precedent.

A well known Washington minister tells of a couple who came to him to be married. The bridegroom was upon his third matrimonial venture, the bride upon her second.

"Please stand up," said the clergyman, prepared to pronounce the necessary words.

The bride looked at the bridegroom. The bridegroom looked at the bride. Then he said politely but firmly:

"We have generally sat."—Exchange.

1,769,889,284 RODE ON NEW YORK CARS

Greatness of City Illustrated by Statistics.

New York.—Professor Supan of Gotha, whose annual Bevolkerung der Erde is accounted the authority on such statistics, last year estimated the population of the world at 1,62 00,000.

During the year which ended June 30 last the ground, underground and overground transportation lines of New York carried more passengers by 148,789,284 than this total. Tables made public by the public service commission giving the number of passengers as 1,769,889,284.

By boroughs the traffic was distributed as follows: Manhattan, 1,112,908,828; Brooklyn, 521,233,013; Bronx, 74,711,453; Queens, 47,467,014; Richmond, 13,578,006. The year's increase for the city was 90,074,580, which is almost equal to the population of the United States.

The figures for the subway and elevated lines in Manhattan are regarded by the engineers of the commission as being the most significant in the new tables. For the first time the subway carried more passengers than the elevated lines. Its total being 327,471,510—more than 1,000,000 each working day. The elevated lines carried 306,845,006, a gain of only 2,574,165, while the subway gained 24,497,654. During the year ending June 30, 1912, the "L" exceeded the subway by 1,296,985.

CHARMS AS CURES.

Curious Remedies That Were Once Popular In England.

Many and varied are the charms that man has used for the cure of diseases. In Northamptonshire, England, a few hairs from a sick child's head are rolled in a piece of meat and given to a dog in the belief that the disease becomes thereby transferred to the animal. In Cornwall the child is fed with the bread and butter of a family whose heads bear the names of John and Joan. Gypsies swear by roast dormouse as a cure for whooping cough, and in Lancashire it is believed that no child will contract that disease who has ridden upon a bear.

Another "cure" was a snake slung round the neck for goiter. This was an old Sussex charm. The Rev. Coker Egerton in "Sussex Folk and Sussex Ways" tells the story from personal observation. "I have known a person," he wrote, "who went a long distance to have a live snake applied to the throat for goiter, and I have known of a servant girl who tried the virtue of a dead one for the same ailment. It was discovered and being obliged to throw it away she said she would go somewhere to get a 'dead man's hand' put to her neck."

Earthworms have been used by Nottingham people for rheumatism. It was necessary to put the worms into a bottle and upon them pour a quantity of powdered quicklime. The resultant compound well rubbed into the affected parts was guaranteed by the prescriber to be a certain cure for rheumatism.

The Lion's Story.

When lions were still numerous and easily observed in southern Africa they were sometimes seen instructing one another in voluntary gymnastics and practicing their leaps, making a bush play the part of the absent game. A hunter tells the story of a lion which had missed a zebra by miscalculating the distance repeating the jump several times for his own instruction. Two of his comrades appearing while he was engaged in this exercise he led them around a rock to show them how matters stood and then, returning to the starting point, completed the lesson by making a final leap. The animals kept roaring during the whole of the curious scene—talking together," as the hunter who watched them said.

When "A m" Spells "Am."

One of the supposed niceties of speech which to many of us seem overdone is the pronunciation of the word program when the French termination me is left off. These careful folk try to shorten the sound of the a with the shortening of the word. But "gram" spelt "gram" in English and may safely be so pronounced wherever it is found. Nobody says telegrum. Why then say progrum?—Christian Science Monitor.

Both Worried.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly remarked the woman as she counted the contents of her purse.—London Tit Bits.

Judging From Results.

"Has Polly got her music lesson mixed up with her gymnasium hour?"

"Of course not. Why do you ask?"

"I thought from the way she was playing she might have thoughtlessly taken the piano for a punching bag."—London Stray Stories.

The World's Gypsies.

The gypsies have passed under a variety of names arising either from their supposed original country or the callings and characteristics of the race. The old English Egyptian, the Spanish Gitana and the Magyar Pharas nepek (Pharaoh's people) all point to an Egyptian origin. The Scandinavian Tatare identifies them with the Mongolian hordes which terrorized early Europe, while the French Bohemian suggests yet another country as their cradle.

As to the names bestowed by their supposed character, the Arab boldly calls them harami (a villain), the Dutchman heydens, or heathens, and the Persian takes his name from their complexion and dubs them karachi, or swarthy. A charter of William the Lion, as early as the twelfth century, mentions their Scotch name of tinklers, which is commonly supposed to be a corruption of tinker, although possibly the substitution of "t" for "z" has produced this form of the Italian zingaro, one of the most widespread of gypsy appellations.—London Spectator.

TRY TO ELIMINATE THE MIDDLEMAN

Seeking Method of Sending Eggs by Parcel Post.

GREAT NEED IS A CONTAINER

With Finding of Safe and Light Box Both Producer and Consumer Would Be Greatly Benefited—Chief of Bureau of Animal Industry Has Long Been Seeking Such a Device.

Washington.—How to get the egg from the farmer or the poultryman to the consumer without the employment of the middleman is the problem that the division of animal husbandry of the bureau of animal industry has sought to solve. It has suggested, cut out the middleman and bring the producer and the consumer together through the parcel post. But Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau, says this is easier said than done. The softness of the eggshell is the great obstacle in the way. No container that fills the bill has been found. The container is sought which is too often a light enough article to secure.

Dr Melvin and his aides have been experimenting for months to find the proper container for mailing eggs.

At that day every day in the year would be worth her weight in gold. There were laid in the United States last year 1,700,000,000 dozen eggs, worth $450,000,000. The price of eggs has gradually increased for twenty years. In 1900 New York paid for the average best fresh eggs from 12 to 29 cents. In 1912 the figures were 20½ to 40 cents. At the same time New York has been consuming more eggs each succeeding year. In 1900 2,737,... cases of eggs were received in New York. Last year the number in cases was 4,721,... In 1891 Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, New York, St Louis and San Francisco received 7,040,888 cases of eggs, and last year 1,... 690,401.

Within the last ten or fifteen years there has been a decided improvement of the quality of eggs and in the methods of handling them. The old custom of selling eggs by the dozen has been discarded, and now the producer disposes of his eggs by the pound. This has improved the character of the egg.

The purest way to insure a desire in the producer to raise better chickens and supply better eggs is to show him that good quality poultry and eggs are worth more than those of poor quality, said H. C. Pierce of the food research laboratory of the bureau of chemistry.

In the southern states this has been done. At one time the North Carolina egg was considered the poorest on the market, the meat was lean. When the producers found that fat eggs weighed more than poor ones they began to take better care of their hens and get better eggs. Soon North Carolina eggs ranked with Tennessee and Kentucky eggs.

Mr Pierce says that $47,000,000 worth of eggs are lost annually in this country between the producer and the consumer.

"In marketing eggs there is an enormous loss," said Mr Pierce. "Much of this is preventable. While this loss falls upon all who handle eggs it is borne chiefly by the producer and the consumer. The producer's loss caused by a decrease in price under present conditions represents that due to spoilage or poor quality. The consumer's loss is due to a curtailed supply because of the eggs that are either of poor quality or a total loss, hence the consumer has to pay higher prices for those that finally reach him.

While these losses are increased at all stages of handling by the producer, the country storekeeper, the produce dealer, the railroad, the commission man and jobber and the retailer, the greatest preventable loss occurs before the produce dealer obtains the goods—that is, while the eggs are still on the farm or in the hands of the small country storekeeper who takes eggs in exchange for supplies."

Reported Verbatim.

Very few speakers are precise and accurate enough to stand well in an absolutely verbatim report. I have come across a verbatim report of a wonderful question addressed by Lord Chief Justice Hyde to an accused person, writes "A Man of Kent" in the British Weekly. If any reader can make head or tail of it I should like to hear from him. Here is the question:

"You took a man in the dark by the throat that man that was guilty of such a thing as when that you did let him go to call his companions to bring the money, bring fellows to you single. I would be glad to know whether in this case they would not have knocked you on the head and killed you."

Running No Risk.

"What," asks the maiden aunt, "going to marry that Mr Newwun? Why, you hardly know the man, Imogene. In the few days you have been acquainted with him you cannot possibly have learned anything of his family or antecedents or habits or personal circumstances."

"That is true, Aunt Keturah. But you have always told me that no woman who knows anything about a man will marry him."

PRINCE KATSURA'S BRAIN HEAVY ONE

Comparison of That of Japanese Statesman and Others.

TOTAL WEIGHT 1,600 GRAMS

Brain of Average Man Weighs Fifty Ounces—Imbeciles' Brains Very Heavy—Japanese Died of Cancer and Willed His Body to Scientists For Examination and Experiment.

Tokyo.—Dr Nagayo's examination of the body of the late Prince Katsura discloses that the brain of that great Japanese statesman who died Oct. 10 weighed slightly more than 1,600 grams. This is about 300 grams heavier than the brain of an average man. The Katsura brain weighed about 51.44 ounces. It was a little lighter than that of Bismarck.

The examination by Dr. Nagayo showed that Prince Katsura died of cancer, which had spread from his stomach to his liver. He was president of a Japanese society devoted to the study of cancer, and he was dissected in accordance with his own request. The widow was present at the post mortem. The surgeons addressed the spirit of the dead prince before and after the operation.

The brain weights of famous men have been as follows:

Turgenieff, Russian novelist, seventy-one ounces.

Dr Abercrombie, Scotch physician, sixty-three ounces.

General B. F. Butler, American soldier, sixty-two ounces.

The heavy novelist Cuvier, naturalist, Jeffreys, English judge, fifty-four to fifty-eight and six-tenths ounces.

Napoleon, Daniel Webster, Agassiz, American naturalist, fifty to fifty-three and six-tenths ounces.

Average man (estimated by Dr. Austin Flint of New York in his "Physiology") fifty and two-tenths ounces.

Average boy of seven, forty-five and nine-tenths ounces.

Leon Gambetta, great French statesman, forty and nine-tenths ounces.

Imbeciles' brains may weigh over seventy ounces. One such, a Russian, had a brain of seventy-eight ounces.

CAT SAVES A THEATER.

Awakens Actor as Flames Devour the Scenery.

Ithaca, N. Y.—Pinky, the Lyceum theater pet cat, saved that large playhouse from destruction and also saved the life of George Williamson, who was asleep in one of the dressing rooms.

Williamson was sleeping soundly when the cat, which is admired by local theater goers, began pawing his face. Its persistence finally caused Williamson to awake. Williamson saw flames near the dressing room.

They gained headway so that he could not put them out with the fire extinguisher, and he called out the fire department.

About $3,000 worth of scenery was damaged.

TALE OF A TIGHTWAD.

Every Man Should Take to Heart the Moral It Points.

We once knew a man who was too stingy to take the newspaper in his home town and always went over to borrow his neighbor's paper.

One evening he sent his son over to borrow the paper, and while the son was on the way he ran into a large stand of bees and in a few minutes his face looked like a summer squash.

Hearing the agonized cries of the son, the father ran to his assistance and in doing so ran into a barbed wire fence, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $4 pair of trousers.

The old cow took advantage of the hole in the fence, got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the stingy man's wife ran out of the house, upsetting a four gallon churn full of cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. She slipped on the cream and fell downstairs, breaking her leg and a $10 set of false teeth. The baby left alone crawled through the spilled cream into the parlor and ruined a $40 parlor carpet. During the excitement the daughter eloped with the hired man, taking the family savings bank with them.

The moral is that every man should be a subscriber to his home newspaper.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The ups and downs of the artist's calling are well illustrated by the fortunes and misfortunes of the late M. Sukhorovsky, a Russian artist. His celebrated painting "Nana" was exhibited all over the world and made a fortune for himself and others. After personally receiving some $300,000 for its exhibition the artist, thinking its vogue over, sold "Nana" for $21,000, and the dealer resold it at double the price. An American bought it and showed it all through the United States, Canada and South America and is reported to have made $1,000,000 by the enterprise. On the other hand, the artist lost all his money by unfortunate investments and was reduced almost to beggary.
